Annual Convention (cont'd)

Dress Code:

Daytime attire for the meeting is casual resort attire. This means good quality attire that you would feel comfortable wearing to a golf club or country club. Corporate logo wear is always acceptable for daytime. Evening attire is very similar to what you would feel comfortable wearing to a country club in the evening. Slacks and a nice shirt for men and a dress or nice separates are perfect for women.

St. Simons Island Weather and Tide Report:

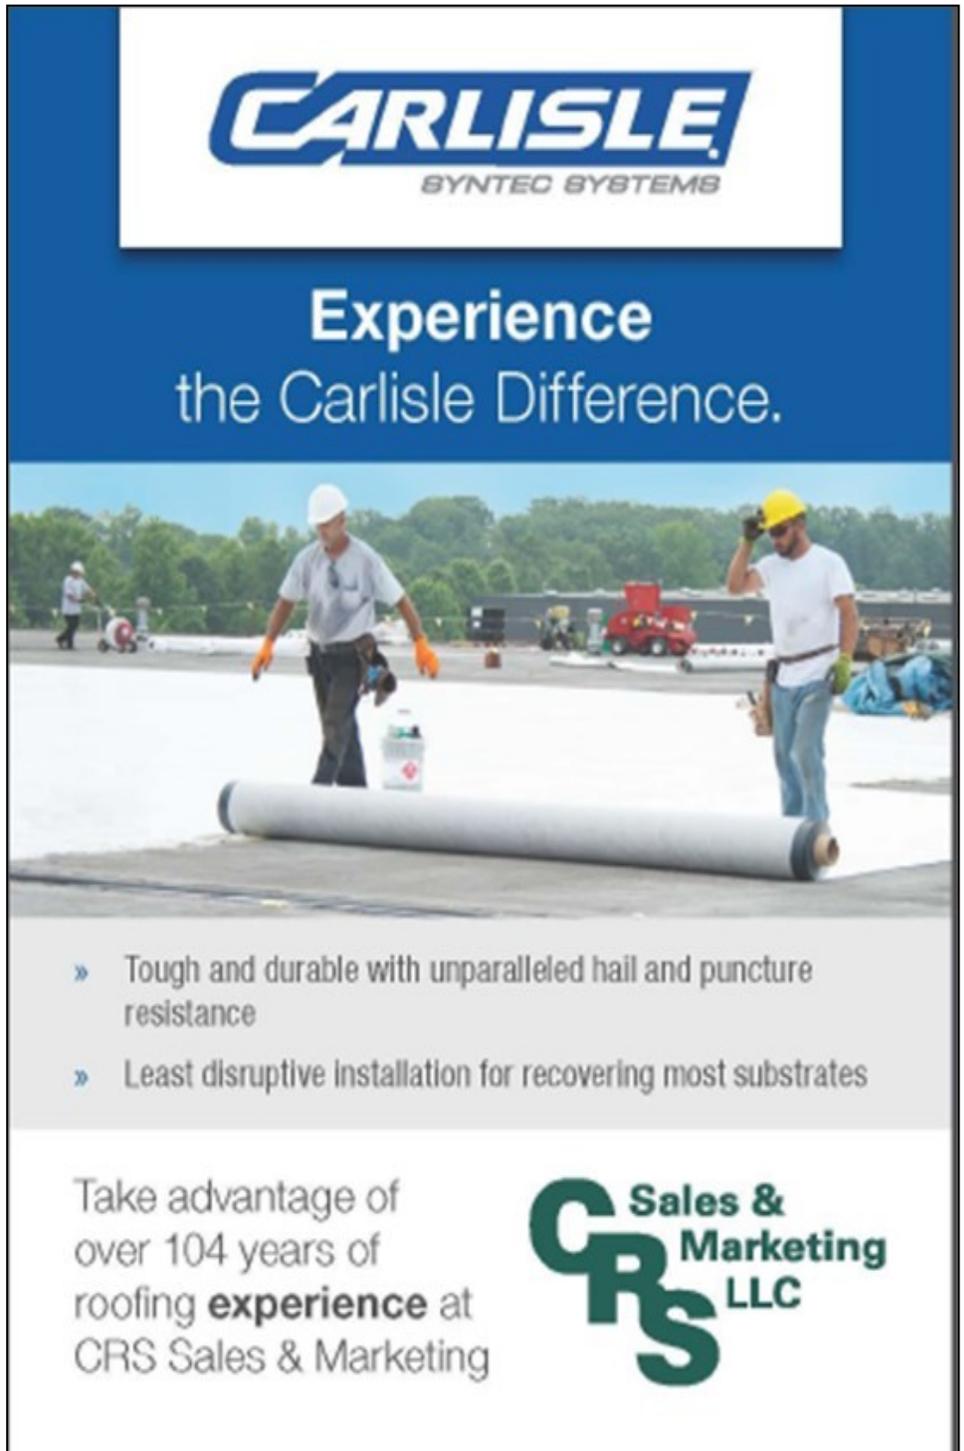

Thursday: 90 High, 78 Low
(10:05 am high tide 4:15 pm low tide)
Friday: 89 High, 78 Low
(10:46 am high tide 4:50 pm low tide)
Saturday: 90 High 78 Low
(11:27 am high tide 5:26 pm low tide)
Sunday: 90 High 78 Low
(12:08 pm high tide 6:03 pm low tide)

Kid's "Night Out"

If you have children that will be attending the Kids Activity/Childcare on Saturday evening from 6:30 pm - 11:00 pm, please RSVP back to info@rsmca.org as soon as you can. We will be having (3) staff members entertaining the kids with movies and more. Hot dogs and hamburgers will be served.

Silent Auction:

We will be using a new mobile bidding app for this year's Silent Auction so it is important that you get us your items description and value. Stay tuned for more information about how to access the app.

How to Respond to a No-Match Letter from the SSA

Recently, the Social Security Administration restarted its practice of mailing “no-match” letters to employers throughout the country. The new “no-match” letters from SSA advise the employer receiving the letter that a social security number for a particular employee does not match the name assigned to that number, according to the records maintained by SSA. The mismatch is discovered during review of the employer’s annual wage reports. The no-match letter presents a payroll tax issue, and not an immigration issue, but it can become an immigration issue if recipients of these letters do not take any action once the letter is received. Indeed, SSA stopped the practice of issuing no-match letters as a result of litigation concerning a proposed U.S. Department of Homeland Security regulation. The proposed regulation provided steps for employers to follow in response to a no-match letter in order to avoid a violation of the country’s immigration laws. Employers that followed the steps in the proposed regulation fell within a “safe harbor”, thereby avoiding a finding that they had actual or constructive knowledge that they were employing unauthorized workers. After delays in its implementation and while the litigation was pending, the regulation was withdrawn.

Employers that receive no-match letters are reminded to act promptly. Employers should be prepared to show that they acted in good faith in their decision to continue to employ or terminate an employee in response to a no-match letter from SSA. Recipients of a no-match letter should not take any adverse employment action against any employee based on receipt of the no-match letter alone. Moreover, employers should refrain from demanding that the employees that are the subject of the letter produce their Social Security cards (though the employer may view the card if the employees voluntarily produce it). Instead, employers should verify that the information provided on the Wage and Tax Statement matches the information contained in the employee’s personnel file. If the incorrect information was placed on the Wage and Tax Statement, employers are advised to correct the error with SSA.

If there was no transcription error by the employer in placing the information on the Wage and Tax Statement, the employer should provide written notice to each individual that is the subject of the no-match letter that there is a discrepancy between the Social Security number provided to the employer and the SSA’s database. The SSA web site includes a sample letter to provide to employees for this purpose. The notice from the employer should ask the employee to resolve the issue.

Employers are advised to allow the employees a reasonable amount of time to resolve the issue with SSA. Employers may require the individual to provide proof that the issue is resolved or that the employee is in the process of resolving the issue. Employers are not required to take any action if employees do not provide corrected information. Despite not having a requirement to take any action if employees do not provide corrected information, employers are advised to follow up with their employees after a reasonable amount of time has passed to ensure steps are being taken to resolve the issue. Employers should document each time they ask the employee whether the issue has been resolved and retain such documentation for four years. What constitutes a reasonable time will depend on the employee’s excuse for not having yet resolved the issue. If the employee appears to be engaged in an active effort to resolve the issue, it may not be necessary to require any further action from the employee.

If no action is being taken by the employee to resolve the issue, it may also be proper to re-verify the employee’s work authorization by completing a new Form I-9. Indeed, a typical subpoena issued by Immigrations and Customs Enforcement during a Form I-9 audit asks for copies of correspondence from SSA regarding mismatched or no matched SSNs. Re-verifying an employee’s work authorization by completing a new Form I-9 is not necessary if the employee completed the Form I-9 without use of the Social Security card (for example, if the employee produced a List A document for I-9 purposes at the time of hire). If this is the response the employer chooses to take in response to a no-match letter from SSA, the employer cannot permit the subject employee to rely on the questionable Social Security card (a List C document) to prove employment eligibility. The employee in this instance must either produce another List C document or a document from List A. If the employee insists that the given Social Security number is correct, the employer may respond to SSA in writing advising that the employer has looked into the matter and the employee states that the given Social Security number is correct. The employer's response to SSA should request that SSA verify its records to determine whether a computer error or other mistake occurred. If SSA responds by indicating the Social Security number is invalid, termination may be appropriate. Legal counsel should be consulted before the termination decision is made. Of course, if the employer has actual knowledge that the employee is unauthorized to work, the employee must be terminated.

How to Respond to a No-Match Letter from the SSA (cont'd)

NRLRC Contract Provision

Disclaimer for Installation of Roof over Concrete Deck

Explanation:

Installing a roof over a structural concrete deck that is not sufficiently dry can cause an array of serious problems. A “wet” concrete deck can cause inadequate adhesion or detachment of roofing materials putting the roof at risk of blow-off or failing wind uplift testing. Over time, there is an increased risk that moisture in the concrete deck will migrate into the roof system. This problem is particularly acute with unvented lightweight structural concrete roof decks, but is not limited to lightweight structural concrete.

A general contractor faced with a compressed project timeline, delays, and pressure to meet schedule may push a roofing contractor to proceed with roof installation before the concrete deck has had enough time to dry. Re-wetting is also a major concern. In the event that a project involves installation of roof system over a structural concrete roof deck, it is important that a roofing contractor include a provision like the one above. Subcontract agreements that roofing contractors are requested to sign commonly include a provision stating that the subcontractor’s commencement of its work constitutes the subcontractor’s acceptance of adjacent surfaces. That’s why it is particularly important that you have a provision which states that commencement of the roofing contractor's work only indicates acceptance of surface of the deck, as is included in the following provision .

On the left side, there are three circular callouts showing different roofing profiles: "5-V-Crimp", "90° PAC-150", and "180° PAC-110". Below these, there is a testimonial: "Equally strong and attractive, the metal roofing systems are now available in 180° crimp and Galvalume Plus coating systems." At the bottom, there is a QR code, social media icons for Twitter and Facebook, the website "PACCLAD.COM", and contact information: "102 Northpoint Parkway, Acworth, GA 30102 | P: 800 272-4462 | F: 770 420 2533". The PAC-CLAD logo is also present.

Contract Provision:

Roofing Contractor is not responsible for the effects of moisture migration originating within the roof deck or substrate, including concrete decks, or due to moisture vapor drive from within the building. Residual moisture within the roof deck, particularly structural concrete decks, can adversely affect the properties and performance of roofing materials, regardless of additives or concrete admixtures that may be included in the concrete mix. Roofing Contractor's commencement of roof installation indicates only that the Roofing Contractor has visibly inspected the surface of the deck for visible defects prior to commencement of roofing and the surface of the deck appeared dry. The 28-day concrete curing period does not signify the deck is sufficiently dry.

Roofing Contractor is not responsible to test or assess the moisture content of the deck or evaluate the likelihood of condensation from moisture drive within the building. Roofing contractor recommends that roofing not commence until probes in concrete decks show that moisture content is no greater than 75% relative humidity when there is no organic content within the roofing materials. Wood fiberboard, perlite and organic paper facers on polyisocyanurate insulation will generate mold with relative humidity as low as about 65-70%.

RSMCA Voluntary Licensing Program

GET LICENSED.

Show customers that you have voluntarily stepped up to the plate, met the qualifications required, passed an examination and demonstrated your commitment to professionalism in the roofing industry.

Become a RSMCA Licensed Roofing Professional TODAY.

“We must all work together to raise Georgia roofing industry standards, improve safety, and build a solid foundation for the next generation of workers.” - Tim Stephens, RSMCA President

The RSMCA Georgia Licensed Roofing Contractor program was developed to increase consumer protection and secure the public confidence in the roofing industry by elevating the roofing contractor’s knowledge, skills and professionalism through voluntary self-regulation. The license is provided through and managed by RSMCA and is available in both Residential (Steep Slope) and Commercial (Low Slope) contractors.

Through RSMCA’s Voluntary Licensing Program, you will receive recognition in association newsletters, event materials and on the RSMCA website. We will also provide you with a variety of materials you can use to promote your new license to customers and prospects.
